Subject: comment on the case

I totally disagree with the government's position regarding Microsoft. A close look at the history of this "case" indicates that this is nothing more than a group of unhappy competitors---unable to develop a product as good as or as marketable as Windows and related programs---whining to an administration that is all too happy to punish success in business (though, interestingly enough, they have no problem collecting Microsoft and other business' taxes to redistribute to those who are less productive!).

Bill Gates should be congratulated, not persecuted, for contributing to our Country's immeasurable advances in technology and business brought about partly because of Microsoft's universally compatible and user-friendly platform.

I dare anyone who disagrees to stand by their position and immediately remove all Microsoft products (including Windows!) from their PCs.
